An Insight Into Emotional Intelligence And COVID 19 - KUBS Webinar

Amidst the current circumstances prevailing due to Covid 19, Karachi University Business School yet again came up with the best need of the time, to enlighten its students with the implementation of Emotional Intelligence so that they can combat the current situation with ease and effectiveness.

On June 11, 2020, KUBS, in collaboration with 3Q Institute London United Kingdom and Queens College, USA initiated a unique Webinar series in the midst of the challenging pandemic.

Coping With COVID-19 Using Emotional Intelligence As A Remedial Tool was a one-of-a-kind virtual seminar that taught students to seek greater spirituality, which in turn strengthens emotional intelligence. The connection with a higher being and the ability to cope with stress by calling on to a higher dimension is a less talked about method when mental challenges of the pandemic are brought up. This idea of learning to develop core mental strength was thus discussed in this scholarly talk and received great appreciation by students and faculty members.

The Global Pandemic And KUBS

The unforeseen global pandemic of the COVID 19 threw the world into a state of lockdown. From offices to industries and entertainment arenas, the world witnessed a quiet that would have been unimaginable in any usual circumstances in 2020. For the education sector in particular, the closure of all institutes and schools meant not only the loss of valuable classroom lectures but also living under high unpredictability of exams and the future. KUBS dealt with this massive cloud of uncertainty by introducing online lectures and assessment based grading, and were executed via Zoom, Google Classroom, Microsoft Teams and Easyclass. This switch to online learning was no short of a challenge, as neither the teachers nor the students were familiar with these technologies. There were inevitable issues at first; ranging from technical adaptability to emotional stress of change in the midst of a pandemic. The responsiveness and flexibility from both teachers and students however ensured the transition to be successfully adapted and soon the new system became routine.
